TASTING NOTES

Villa Le Prata Brunello di Montalcino 2013. This Brunello di Montalcino reveals a harmonious balance of power and elegance, shaped by high-altitude vineyards and traditional methods. There are layered aromas of ripe cherry, plum, and dried flowers, complemented by earthy undertones and a hint of spice from extended oak aging. The palate is full-bodied yet refined, with firm tannins, vibrant acidity, and a long, persistent finish that reflects its 36 months in large oak barrels and additional bottle maturation.

Food Matches

Costata di Manzo, Grilled Ribeye with Rosemary & Bolognese

GROWER

Villa le Prata

The historic Villa le Prata story dates back to 1860, when the unification of Italy begun. Garibaldi himself discovered the Tuscan based Villa and made it his own hunting lodge. It then became the country house of the Bishop of Montalcino until the early decades of the 20th century. In 1980, Massimo... Read More

REGION

Tuscany

Tuscany is arguably one of the most important wine-producing regions in Italy, where it is known locally as Toscana. A full 68% of the region is classified as 'hilly' and hillside vineyards produce the overwhelming majority of the highest quality wines. Sangiovese, the region's signature grape varie... GRAPE

Sangiovese

Sangiovese is Italy's most widely planted red grape variety, particularly common in Central Italy and most notably, principally responsible for the fine red wines of Tuscany. It is the base of the blend for Chianti, Vino Nobile di Montepulciano and most Supertuscans. It produces high quality wines w... Read More
