REGION

Tuscany

Tuscany is arguably one of the most important wine-producing regions in Italy, where it is known locally as Toscana. A full 68% of the region is classified as 'hilly' and hillside vineyards produce the overwhelming majority of the highest quality wines. Sangiovese, the region's signature grape varie... GRAPE

Sangiovese

Sangiovese is Italy's most widely planted red grape variety, particularly common in Central Italy and most notably, principally responsible for the fine red wines of Tuscany. It is the base of the blend for Chianti, Vino Nobile di Montepulciano and most Supertuscans. It produces high quality wines w... Read More

TASTING NOTES

Canalicchio di Sopra Brunello di Montalcino Montosoli DOCG 2019. This Brunello di Montalcino from the Montosoli cru shows remarkable elegance and depth, with vibrant aromas of red cherry, wild berries, and subtle floral notes layered over hints of spice and minerality. On the palate, it is structured yet refined, offering purity of fruit, lively acidity, and a long, vertical finish that speaks to its terroir and ageing potential.
