REGION

Tuscany

Tuscany is arguably one of the most important wine-producing regions in Italy, where it is known locally as Toscana. A full 68% of the region is classified as 'hilly' and hillside vineyards produce the overwhelming majority of the highest quality wines. Sangiovese, the region's signature grape varie... Read More

GRAPE

Sangiovese

Sangiovese is Italy's most widely planted red grape variety, particularly common in Central Italy and most notably, principally responsible for the fine red wines of Tuscany. It is the base of the blend for Chianti, Vino Nobile di Montepulciano and most Supertuscans. It produces high quality wines w... Read More

TASTING NOTES

Black cherry, hints of forest floor, tobacco and balsamic flavors beautifully integrated and concentrated with the rich bouquet. Well-structured and depth with dense integrated tannins highlighted by a bright acidity.
